CHAPTER XIII.

I told Howard Scott of my interview with General Winder, and by way of inducing me to believe that I had nothing to fear he introduced me to Captain Flynn, of Indiana, and Captain Sawyer. of New Jersey, two officers who had been condomned to death because of yellowers who had been condomned to death because of yellowers. I said nothing to these gentlemen about my own case, but the fact that they borehomselves with a quiet confidence that their own Government was able to protect them gave me much comfort.

For some weeks I had noticed that soon after the lights were out every alternate night Howard Scott would orcep from under our blanket and would not return till after midnight, and often not till near daylight. I also saw earth sut he avoided the subject pointedly, and I did not refer to it again.

This went on for weeks, Howard getting thinner, dirtier and more ragged every day. It was not curiosity so much as an intense desire to do something to break up the horrible monotony of my life that decided me to find out my friend's secret for myself. One night, just as the guards were calling outer in the Upper Potomac room were shouting and singing as usual, Howard to me the content in the Chapter Comment of the Chapter Ch just as the guards were calling out: "Ten o'clock and all's well," and the men in the Upper Potomac room were shouting and singing as usual, Howard got up quietly, fixed the blanket about my shoulders, then with his boots in his hands crept down the narrow lane between the ranks of prostrate men.

Before he had gone fifty feet I was up and atter him. leaving my old boots behind. Down the steps to the Lower Chicamauga, down the steps to the cook-room, he went. The lights from the lamps on Carrey street made it comparatively bright here. I saw the crouching figure of a man at the fire-place, being figure of a man at the fire-place, but it is a supported to the construction of the control o

"Is that you, Johnston?" whispered the man.
"Yes," I replied. "Is all right?"
"All right. Scott's just gone down. Be careful," said the guard. I slipped into the collar under the hospital.

I readily agreed to this; and after a few words, in which he told of the tunnel they were building out of Libby, he led me across the floor, the stones of which appeared to be covered with a substance like loose folder. After leaving me standing against the wall for some minutes Howard came back and said:

The boys are a bit surprised, but y'll be glad to have you join in. w, ask no questions, but do as you told."

He led me up along the wall to where I felt soft earth under my feet und heard a number of men whispering—every communication was whispered. "I am going in," said Howard, "and a you are green to the business, you must stand here and fan."

I felt an irregular opening cut into all through the stone foundation. This may be a superior of the tunnel. A man tanding at the opposite side of the ening passed over to me the two correst of what felt like a blanket, and lapered: "Steady; keep it up slow steady."

The man in the tunnel drew in after him a square wooden box, such as had been used in the prison for a spittoon. At opposite sides his box had cords. At opposite sides his box had cords. It is not not seen that the prison for a spittoon. At opposite sides his box had cords. It is not only and also as a means of signalling, by the man working within, when it was full.

The dirt taken from the tunnel was scattered over the floor, from which the loose fodder was first removed—it was always placed back when the night's work was finished.

I found the fanning very hard work, but was relieved every half hour, as was the man digging inside. The sensation of working in the dark with those her forget, while the time was regulated by the "all's well" of the guards, under whose feet a pathway to "liberty and God's land" was being cut.

About one o'clock we were relieved by another gang, and with my friend, I crept back, as I had come, to the Upper Chekamaga.

Hitherto I had been living in daily dread of a summons from the prison officials, to answer for the death of Frank Brent, but now that I had something to do and a prospect of escaping, my feelings underwent a radical change and I became positively cheerful.

thing to do and a prospect of waspen-my feelings underwent a radical change and I became positively cheerful. Through Howard Soot! met Colonel Ross and all my fellow-workers, some of whom were old friends. There were less than thirty in all engaged in this wonderful work, and the secreey with which they succeeded in keeping their scheme from all the other prisoners was not the least amazing part of the under-taking.

not the least amazing part of the undertaking.

I soon got to know the tunnel as well as if I had been its originator. Its course was due east under a roadway that ran down from Carey street to the canal and a right angles to the prison front. On the other side of this short street there was a high-board fence that shut out the space from beyond view of the guards. This space was a sort of court yard for another warehouse to the east, and in this warehouse great quantities of boxes were stored; these boxes had been received under flag of truec for the prisoners, but, about January I to 1894, the delivery of them conceived. As the timel neared completion my own anxiety became so great that rest during the day became impossible, for an intense impulse was on me to be at work all the time. I found another Kentuckian who was possessed in the same way. This was Captain Johnston, who could work harder and go longer without food or steep than any man I ever met.

At length, in early February, the tunover met.

At length, in early February, the tunnel was nearly completed, and Captain Johnston was missing from roll eali. The prison was searched for him, and the tunnellers, who knew where he was, feltcold and nervous till Ross told them that Johnston must have escaped by bribing one of the guards, as Captain Shelton had done a short time before.

Now and then letters were received under flag of truce, and those were occasions never to be forgotten. Soon and the second of t

The part vital to my story I here transcribe:

HOME, Feb. 4, 1884.

"MY DEAR CAPTAIN WATTS: While all my sympathies in this cruel war are on the side of the Sunny South, still I must confess I am deeply pained to learn of the misfortune that has befallen you. For a brave man to be deprived of his his treatment; but as the Confederate authorities can not properly feed nor clothe their own brave men in the field, it stands to reason that the prisoners of war in their own brave ms suffer dearly for life's necessities.

Howard and I decided to keep close to-gether, so we held each other's hands that we might not be pared by the crowd we found about the opening in the hearth at ten o'clock. If these men had moved with the order of soldiers, five hundred, instead of one hundred and fitty, might have gone through; but, as it was, they jostled about the open-ing, pulling men out who were half in, and shouting and swearing like so many mad men. If it were not for the customary noise and shouting and swearing like so many mad men.

If it were not for the customary noise in the Upper Potomac room, the guards must have noticed the hubbub near the chinney. For fully two hours Howard and I waited, still holding each other's near us raised the cry: "The guardsit the guardsit and on the instant, the crowd about the opening surged away and rushed up the stairs.

The space about the hearth was cleared and our chance had come. I dropped into the cellar first, closely followed by the Lieutenant. We needed no guide to lead us to the opening, and as soon as found it we plunged in, I again in the advance.

About the middle of the tunnel we had run on a sharp bowlder that forced a slight deflection northward; here, as I slight deflection northwart; nere, as i groped my way through, I came upon a man stuck hard and fast. It proved to be an Austrian Count, Licutenant von Klodt, of the Army of the Potomae, and a splendid officer. He had come over to see the war, and he spoke but little English, and this little vanished in the "Push ahead!" I said, prodding at him as I was being prodded myself.

"Gott in Himmel! I can't. I'm fast!" he replied in German.

"Your clothers?"

"Yes, my breeches."

"Slip them off and I'll carry them out for you," I said.

It was a starlight night with a keen frost in the air, but it was a royal change from the fetid atmosphere of the prison. We did not hurry, but walked leisurely to the east. Under the lamp at the corner of the prison I saw a guard standing, and I heard his cry: "One o'clock; post number ten and all's well!" "All's well!" echoed Howard and we passed out of sight of the prison as we passed out of sight of the prison and made our way planned to follow for a mile or two and then make for the Chickahominy swamp, in which we were to remain in hiding for the day.

The lateness of the hour favored us. Beyond the prison we saw no guards, and excepting a drunken man in uniform who saluted us as we passed, we saw no soldiers. Neither of us had boots fit for marching, but we paid no heed to this. Once on the road leading to the North we quickned our pace. We had gone about two miles when a fre in the cluvance caused us to change our course.

We turned to the east, climbing over earthworks and passing scores of guns, now harmless as the birds that some day were to build their nests in them.

We were in doubt as to the location of the Chickshoming when to our great dealight we entered a dense growth of water willows and soon were on the ice that covered the swamp. This ice was very treacherous; again and again it gave way under us, letting us down to our arm pits and forcing us to break long avenues before we could find a dry knoll or a log that would enable us to rise. And so we keep painfully on till the blessed sun rose up and warmed our faces and our hearts.

ROMANTIC STORY

The Late Civil War.

By JOHN R. MUSICK.

It is with no little pleasure that we announce a new story from the pen of this POPULAR WESTERN WRITER. Thousands of readers all over the West have read and admired Mr. Musick's stories, and to such (among whom can be counted surely the readers of this paper) the mere announcement of a new serial by him will awaken the most pleasant anticipations of a rare literary treat.

is a war story of more than usual excellence, as war stories go, and is certain to add much to the already wide reputation of its author. It is, of course, full of stirring incident, has a strong and interesting plot, and besides being correct in its historic details, is utterly free from partisan coloring. Of course it is written in a loyal spirit, but at the same time full credit is given "the other side" for their courage and bravery.

Resolved by the farmers of Breathitt county, 1. That we greatly fear that true patriotism and wise statesmanship is not as fully represented in the Constitutional Convention as should have been.

2. That we fear true patriotism in a majority of the members of this convention is stifled by the love of money.

3. That we think the long-continued session and stupid laziness of the present

3. That we think the long-continued as it is in the state of this comment is an outrage on the tax payers of this Commonwealth, an outrage on humanity and civilization, an outrage on our Republican form of Government, and an outrage upon the honor and patriotic examples of our forefathers.

4. That we think if this convention cannot revise the Constitution without bankrupting the State, it had better come home and let us live under the past forty years.

5. That we return our thanks to the patrons of Crockettsville for their generosity and kind treatment which they showed while we were among them.

6. That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the HAZEL GREEN HERALD and the Jackson Huxler for publication, and the Jackson Huxler for publication of the public leads, the heritage of the people of our State and also those of sister states.

BRIFF BON-BONS

There is one thing that should not be exhibited at the World's Fair—a Chicago municipal election.

"Insanity" as a plea for murderers has given way to "hypnotism," or as old-timers used to call it, "mesmerism."

Mr. Harrison evidently isn't superstitious or he would not venture to "swing around the circle" in the face of the fate of the other Presidents who accomplished that feat.

We haven't much of a navy to fight Italy with, but if the American eagle emits one of his fiercest shricks the organ grinders will all be frightened out of seven years' growth.

Democratic politicians may as well Democratic politicians may as well begin now to brighten up on Judge Jim Jewell's famous phrase, for that it will be of practical utility just after the State convention is assured. Here's the cue, p. i. h.

The adage that "few office-holders die, and none resign" will have to be revised if Senator Edmunds' example becomes contagious. However, come to think of it, an epidemic of resignations would please a great many people.

There is always hope for a man who is aware of his own faults. Ex-Senator Blair, just before sailing for China, his new post of duty, declined to be interviewed, saying, "I have talked too much new post of duty, declined to be interviewed, saying, "I have talked too much already." He had evidently read the

When the young emperor of Germany has a spell of indigestion and speaks a little cross, as all of us liable to do under inttle cross, as all of us liable to do under similar circumstances, all Europe shivers with fear and the air is full of war ru-mors. Americans have many troubles, but, thank heaven, fear of war isn't one of them.

Ex-Senator Ingalls says he proposes to devote his attention to making money by farming. We trust that he will succeed, but whether he does or not he will be better occupied than in making money out of the farmers, by exacting usurious rates of interest for money loaned upon mortgage, as he is credited with having done for years.

It was John Sherman who originated the expressive political phrase, "I am looking after my fence," and he has now started a new one on its travels by say ing, "I came out here to build a barn." There are not a few people in Ohio who would like to know the kind of crop the wily politician proposes to store in that

There is a wide difference of opinion There is a wide difference of opinion in the ranks of the Republican party on the question of Canadian reciprocity. Senator Morrill says, "It will never come," and ex-Representative Butterworth says, "It is bound to come." These, of course, are the extremes, but even among those who favor the idea there is little hope of anything being accomplished under the present circums stances.

Secretary Tracy is deserving of the sympathy of all honest people in his effort to take the navy yards of the country out of politics, but he will probably realize, if he has not already done so, that he has undertaken the largest contract of his life, and his failure to carry it out need not surprise anybody. Mr. Tracy is only one man and the politicians who work the navy yards for their own personal benefit are numerous and influential.

The belief that Hon. John Young Brown will be the Democratic nominee and the next Governor of Kentucky has steadily grown until it is now so strong as to be a conviction with a great major as to be a conviction with a great analytic of the thinking citizens of this Commonwealth. Even the few who deyoutly desire his defeat admit that he is the most available man and the strongest candidate that will present his claims to the State convention. The honest year. the State convention. The honest yeo-manry of the grand old State having looked over the political planetarium and most thoroughly enavased the chances of each candidate, have witnessed "the hand writing on the wall," and look upon his nomination as a good omen for their common cause. His past record is so thoroughly in accord with the demands of the faquers—he has been so honest and conscientious in his opposition to corporations—that they will form a and conseientious in his opposition to corporations—that they will form a strong factor in his favor when the culminating contest comes. And they will be well rewarded for that favor in the next four years. So well, indeed, that every man can point to his vote for Hon. every man can point to his vote for Hon.
John Young Brown as the proudest act of his life, and the young men of today, the grandfathers of the future, will tell their children and their children's children of Brown's triumph with a thrill of dren of Brown's triumph with a thrill of cestatic joy in recollection of the event. One of the most distinguished citizens of a distant State, in a private letter to the editor of this paper, says of Col. Brown, "There should be no failure in his nomi-nation; he would make a Governor who would be an honor even to that State, whose chair has been so often filled by as great a line of Governors as ever managed the destiny of any State." Fellow-citizen Democrats, in the face of all facts in favor of Mr. Brown, can of all facts in favor of Mr. Brown we afford not to nominate him? While the opportunity offers let us grasp it, and secure in him a Governor who is in sym-pathy with the people.

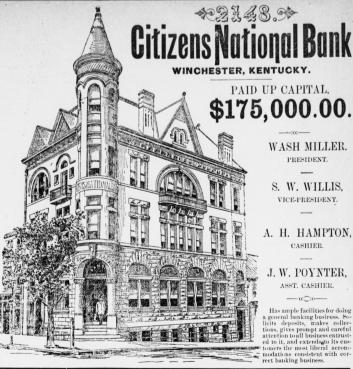

That our young friend, Hon. Mitchell C. Alford will have no opposition for the nomination for Lieutenant Governor in the Democratic State convention at Lou-isville is an accepted fact, and is in accord with the popular will, but nevertheless his host of friends should continue their arduous devotion to his cause steadfastly and unceasingly until he reaches the goal of his ambition. Zeal for no other candidate should render his friends less zealous in his cause, and no jugglery that zealous in his cause, and no jugglery that will in the least jeopardize his chances for the nomination should for a moment be considered. "Ways that are dark and tricks that are vain" might involve his interests, and we admonish his friends to stand aloof if such be attempted. No man who will go before the Louisville convention with a claim has done so much for the Democratic party within the present decade as has Mitch Alford, no one deserves more from it, and his devotion should be duly awarded in his nomination by acclamation. This his devotion should be duly awarded in his nomination by acclamation. This his past service justly merits, and fidelity to party interest must have the seal of favor if we are to hope for future success. Alford by acclamation is the appropriate thing and let every delegate join in the glad acclaim. glad acclaim.

Judge Swango is still sanguine of suc-cess in his race for the nomination for Register of the Land Office, and if he is Register of the Land Office, and if fie is properly supported from this section, as he should be, he will win with hands down. Every man in Eastern Kentucky should stand by him, and more especially the mountain men, as he is the only candidate representing this section in the scramble for State offices. In every county convention held next Saturday the delegates should be instructed to vote for Judge Swango in the State convention, wild not also also discovered to the secure his nomination." If elected, Judge Swango would make a right Reg. Judge Swango would make a right Reg. Judge Swango would make a right Reg.

sympathy for the widow of Wood Logmoor will give the nomination for Appelate Clerk to Abram Addams, her homines acalled the grip. It has been fiscase called the grip. It has been of the masses, and those men who are covered that the trouble was caused infected water.

Sympathy for the widow of Wood Logmoor will give the nomination for Appelate Clerk to Abram Addams, her homines receive the full party vote in charge of the office. This is the motion of the masses, and those men who are covered that the trouble was caused infected water.

The papers over the State favorably mention Hon. Joe Elliston, of Mt. Sterling, in his race for Attorney-General, and he will certainly go into the State convention with a formidable force of followers. In the short time that he has been canvassing he seems to have visited ever county of the Commonwealth, and everywhere he has found friends.

everywhere he has found friends. Apropos of the proposed reunion of the Fourth Kentucky Cavalry, C. S. A., soon to be held, Judge G. B. Swango, who was a member of the same brigade (Giltner's), suggests that there be a re-pression of the brigade and names Cynthia union of the brigade, and names Cynthi ana as the proper place to hold it. This command contained a large number of men from this section, and should they conclude to meet at Cynthiana they will have a royal time.

The Bourbon News thinks Hon. Jack Hendrick will undoubtedly be the nomi nee for Attorney General despite all the opposition he has. Mr. Hendrick lives in Fleming, and will be the choice of our people should Mr. Elliston at any time be eliminated from the race. With two such candidates as Mr. Elliston and Mr. Hendrick in Eastern Kentucky, the Western end of the State has only a Rhea of hope for the Attorney Generalship.

Col. John O. Hodges will go into the ention at Louisville with m for him for Superintendent of Public Instruction than any man in the race, according to the best information we can obtain. This being so, he bids fair to get the nomination, and in that case we have only to say that the Democratic party will have chosen wisely and the common school system secured the best equipped superintendent to be had in the State.

STONEWALL JACKSON'S FIDDLE.

It Was More Difficult to Master Than Mathematics.

When Jackson first entered West Points he was regarded as a remarkably stupid and green youth. General Whiting, who afterward served in the Confederate army, was then a cadet in the confederate with the custom which then prevailed at the military academy. Whiting thought him at first remarkably dull, but noticed that he studied and worked with dogged persistency. The class of which Wilcox and Whiting were members was graduated jack prior to the Mexican in Washington on their way to Mexico, and on the night of their arrival they were invited to go with Jefferson Davis, then a member of the House, to areception given at the White House. Later both Davis and T. J. Jackson turned their faces toward the Rio Grande. At the close of the war Jackson ranked every member of his classification of on Governor's Island, near New York, and when several brother officers from Governor's Island called on them Whiting asked:

"What has become of Tom Jackson; how is he getting on?"

"Badly, badly," replied the officer, "since he has stopped griting he has stopped griting he has stopped griting he has stopped griting he has stopped a griting he has stopped a griting he has stopped griting he has stopped griting he has stopped griting he has stopped griting he has the proof of the stat-books. So his new fad makes it awful for us. Every minute he can spare he devices to practicing on the its text-books. So his new fad makes it awful for us. Every minute he can spare he devices to practicing on the ranker his violin you'll listen to a second Pagantini before he gives up."

But Whiting's prejiction was not verified. Jackson never became a musican.—Chicago Evening Journal.

Outwardly the books present the common appearance of a block of wood, and that is the first impression; but a minute examination reveals the fact that each is a complete history of the particular tree which it represents. At the back of the book the bark has been removed from a space which allows the tree to be placed as a title. One side is formed from the split of the tree, showing its grain and natural fracture; the other shows the wood when worked smooth and varnished. One end shows the grain as left by the saw, the other the finely-polished wood. On opening the book it is found to contain the fruit, tree. These are supplemented by a well-printed description of its habits, usual location and manner of growth. BURLEY TOBACCO

Its Culture, Curing, Assorting and Handling.

I have many inquiries from those most familiar with the burley tobacco, seeking information as to the best manner of culture, curing and handling, and i give some suggestions approved by the most successful growers of burley tobac-

Much depends upon beginning right a raising a crop of tobacco. Secure lenty of plants and have them early. Burn your beds sufficient to kill all the plenty of plants and have them early. Burn your beds sufficient to kill all the seed of weeds or grass; then dig up the bed, rake and pulverize every clod, re-moving all obstructions that may be found in the bed. The bed should be made compact by rolling or tramping with the feet.

Burley seed ought to be sown as early as possible, and the plants protected from the fly by canvassing the bed with cheap cotton. Burley plants are more preyed upon by insects than other varieties. A dessert spoonful of seed will sow ten feet source.

Plant early (by 20th of May, if po ble), as it requires about one hundred days to mature after planting. Lay the rows three feet six to nine inches, and set in the rows eighteen to twenty-four inches. Begin plowing and hoeing soon after planting, and the more you work your tobacco, the better body it will nave. If cultivation with the plow is neglected, the ground gets hard, and the lower leaves of the plant burn after topping.

The plant should not be allowed to flower out; top as soon as the button appears. There are several opinions among growers about topping. Some top as high as twenty leaves, but we are satisfied that fourteen to sixteen leaves (in ordinary soil with a usual season) will make as many pounds and a better quality of tobacco. Keep all suckers off, that the strength of the plant may be concentrated in the leaves. The search for worms should not cease from the time they make their appearance until the crop is housed.

It is generally very difficult for beginners to determine when burley tobacco is ripe, and consequently a fine crop is often injured by being cut green. If there is no danger of frost it should stand until the second crop of suckers has been taken off; hence the necessity of early planting.

Some planters prefer housing as soon as cut, while others leave it on the scaffeld a weeke fore housing as soon as cut, while others leave it on the scaffeld a weeke green and the scaffeld a weeke green as the seaffeld a weeke fore housing as The plant should not be allowed to some planters preter moting as some as cut, while others leave it on the scaf-fold a week or ten days before housing. Never use fire in curing burley tobacco, as it renders it useless for manufactur-

Land good, and season favorable, burley grows very large, and requires more house room than the heavier varieties formerly raised. The tiers in the barn should be at least three feet one above the other, so that it may not lap much, for there is the danger of house burning.
Hang the sticks in the tiers about eight inches apart.

ASSORTING AND MAN

ASSORTING AND HANDLING.
It is a matter of importance that care should be taken in stripping and assorting a crop, as its market value depends much upon this. Every crop should be assorted into four classes, and, if the crop is large, five are better. First, take off the trash, or leaves nearest the ground generally chaffy and light. Second, the lugs, which are next above the trash. Third, the bright leaf on the middle of the stalk, which is generally the most salable tobacco of the crop. Fourth, the red leaf, which is the next best if the top or bud leaves (which are smaller and or bud leaves (which are smaller and darker) are kept out of this class, and it is best to keep them separate, if the crop is sufficiently large. Here you have either the four or five grades, as the size ss sumeently large. Here you have either the four of five grades, as the size of the crop may warrant. In brief, the crop is to be assorted with regard to length and color. Torn, worm-eaten or damaged leaves should be kept out of the best grades.

Some small or imperfect stalks may not embrace all the grades described, but some small or imperfect stalks may not embrace all the grades described, but it can be easily decided into which grade the yield belongs by comparison of length and color.

If several hands are engaged in stripping tobacco, it is preferable that each stripper should only take off one grade of tobacco, beginning with the trash and pass the stalk to the next party. In this way each stripper is only looking for one grade, and is not apt to be confused in its selection; and if he fails to pluck all the leaves of his grade it will be detected by the next stripper. Do not make the hands too small; fifteen leaves will not be too large. The leaf hogsheads should be made to weigh about one thousand pounds net, or twelve hundred if the hogsheads are very large. The common grades should weigh from twelve to thirteen hundred pounds net. Burley tobacco must not be prized hard. In case it is necessary to prize two or more grades in the same hogshead, it is best to pack in all of one grade before beginning with the action. with the other.

with the other.

For early shipments the question of order is not so important; the tobacco must not be dry euough to break or damage by handling, neither must it be wet enough to bruise by prizing; between these two points you are safe for early shipments. Tobacco that is to be held for the summer market must be carefully treated as to order, as it is of great importance that it should be kept perfectly sweet, and it will require experience portance that it should be kept perfectly sweet, and it will require experience rather than advice to accomplish this.

Tobacco should be stripped as soon after curing as possible; and if not ready to ship it should be bulked, if the proper order can be obtained. By this means none of the vital substance is lost by evaporation, and a much better flavor is obtained.—C. Y. Wilson, Commissioner of Agriculture, in Trades Journal.

Through the Weary Hours
Of many a night, made doubly long by its protracted agony, the rheumatic sufferer tosses to and fro on his sleepless ferer tosses to and fro on his sleepless couch, vainly praying for that rest which only comes by fits and starts. His mal-ady is one which ordinary medicines too often fail to relieve, but there is ample evidence to prove that the efficient blood depurent, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, affords the rheumatic a reliable means of affords the rheumatic a reliable means of relief. Check the malady in its incipi-ent stages, when the first premonitory twinges come on, with this agreeable medicine, and avoid years of torture. Whatever be the rationale of the active influence of the Bitters upon this malady, certain it is that no evidence relating to its effect is more direct and positive than that which relates to its action in cases that which relates to its action in cases of rheumatism. Like all sterling reme-dies, however, it deserves a protracted, systematic trial, and should not be abandoned because not at once remedial. It is equally efficacious in dyspepsia, in-digestion and kindred diseases.

The Governor's race has so far present no sensational features. By taci By tacit ed no sensational features. By tactic consent all oratorical bouts between the candidates have ceased. It may be that John Young Brown's great talent as a speaker has prompted his opponents to exercise that discretion which is the better part of valor. Wherever Mr. Browr has spoken he has captured his audience by the vigor of his logic and the charm of his eloquence. He has shown himself so thoroughly equipped upon every sub-ject of import to the people that his speeches have carried with them the con-viction that a fine mind, an honest heart and a brave spirit would govern this State when John Young Brown succeed-ed Simon Bolivar Buckner.

Wherever Mr. Brown goes his strength of character, his winning personality, his many striking and manly qualities enlist hundreds to his support. From the beginning of his canvass he has kept his forces well in hand. There have here no descriptor. The safet have his forces well in hand. There have been no desertions. The ranks have been receiving new accessions constantly. As an exponent of sound Democracy, as a pure, true party man, faithful to its teachings, true to its every principle, and scorning any demagogic appeal, he stands unrivaled.

and scorning any demagogic appeal, he stands unrivaled.

Mr. Clay does not look sanguine. Gen. Hardin is working quietly, but the field seems to have been winnowed before he decided to go harvesting. Mr. Clardy is not in it. Mr. Brown is active, tireless, cool and determined. He is a good executive and there are no rough places along his line of battle. His friends are enthusiastic. They are organized in every county in the State. They will go into the convention shoulder to shoulder like veterans. They will nominate him and they will elect him.

The Critic is not a partisan in this contest. It is for the best man, and it believes the will win a clean and splendid victory upon his merits. There is every reason to believe that John Young Brown will be the next Governor of Kentucky.—Louisville Critic.

cretion, it seemed to me, beyond his years; and in his maturity those charac-teristics are all the more plainly seen teristics are all the more plainly seen.
He was very studious, giving to his books all the evenings and hours usually idled away by boys and the results of the course are now seen in his education which is much beyond the average. This has told strongly on his buriness success, which is simply splendid though yet in its beginning.

I am aware that these statements are but receivition of truths perfectly well to represent him as an agent in any kind of business—public as well as private. The people are waking up to demand something more than a brass band man something more than a brass band man to pose as a candidate. The ability to tell stale jokes and set up whisky for the crowd is not ability of the sort that makes a country prosperous, and the people of all parties are finding it out fast. They must have candidates who are clear and clean, as men; who are pure and true, as politicians. Those who would represent the people in any who would represent the people in any way, must be in full sympathy with them; must be greatly as who would represent the people in any way, must be in full sympathy with them; must be gentlemen of marked in-dividuality in whose integrity the utmost confidence an be placed. He must be a man whom the people can believe when he tells them in plain words what he is for and what he will try to do, and not a man who flatters or amuses us for a passing hour, but gives not a thought, or ssing hour, but gives not a thought or care for us or our children when the cer

My knowledge of Mr. Robert—general and intimate—is such that I can not and intimate—is such that I can not easily be mistaken in my estimate of him, and my candid opinion based on that knowledge is that in every way he answers the requisites of my ideal candi-date, as pen lined above—an ideal the people I am sure are coming to demand.

Should this side of the district re the recognition and justice to which it is entitled, then Mr. Roberts will be our next Senator, and he will discharge the trust so well that when his service is ended all the people will find it in their hearts to say, "Well done, good and hearts to say, "Well done, good and taithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few thing, we will make thee ruler over many."—"Kuttawah," in Three Forks Enterprise.
